

Looking at the News with Col. Hugh Clark

It is customary to speak of unhappy Ireland but the adjective is misapplied. Her history is unhappy but her people are not. Even the poorest are not unhappy. On the contrary, they are light-hearted, carefree. Theirs are the simple pleasures that always please. They get fun even out of their spites and fights, and give fun too. No other race has added so much to the gaiety of nations. Their jokes and bulls have been staple commodities for centuries. Smiles and tears chase each other through Irish song and literature. Let's wear a shamrock on the 17th in honor of a distinctive race that has furnished the world with so much merriment and of many men of light and learning.

The world will not be bored to ennui so long as the race survives. The commonplace has no part in the national character. What the Irish do and say may be inconsistent but it won't be dull. The country is hard to govern because it is a nation of poets, rebels against the conventions and the established order of things. The English may be pardoned for failing to govern it harmoniously when the Irish themselves cannot do it. Like Father O'Flynn, they have a way wid'em even in heaven where the harp that once will be the leading instrument in the orchestra, or there'll be the devil to pay, so there will.

Those who expect something like the N.R.A. to be put into effect by the Federal government overlook the fact that the provinces have certain rights and powers granted them by the constitution, of which they are very jealous. For instance, they alone have power to govern hours and wages of labor, and if the federal government should attempt to install codes for industries it would find its action contested in the courts. Perhaps, however, the provinces might be induced to agree to concerted action in carrying out such a program, but unanimity among the legislatures can hardly be expected. What is needed is a general overhauling of the B. N.A. Act.

Wm. Phelps says that a man begins to grow old when he ceases to look forward. He will not grow much older, however, if at the intersections, he does not look to the right and left as well.

"Better death than defeat," says the leader of the Spanish Communists in declaring war against the Spanish Fascists. Death is defeat when it comes unnecessarily.

An American predicts that the world will end in February, 1937. What we are hoping is that bankers will lend by that time.

Few industries suffered more in the past few years than the lumber industry. It was looking up last fall and lumbermen made preparations for extensive operations. Labor agitators, allegedly Communist, got busy at once and were having some success when winter itself took a hand in the game. The heavy snowfall was even more effectual than labor agitation in reducing the winter cut, thereby decreasing employment and increasing the lumberman's liabilities. When lumbermen get busy next fall the same labor agencies will also get busy. They don't want work for themselves or for others. All they want is to make trouble.

We feel sympathy for any man who when he has had a drink or two meets with an accident while driving a car. He might have met with the same accident even if he did not have a drink or two, but the law is very properly more severe upon him if he

VULCAN CONCERT ORCHESTRA PRESENT CONCERT MODERN AND CLASSICAL MUSIC

Splendid Program Deserved Greater Patronage Than Received

"A wonderful concert, best musical talent south of Calgary, deserved far greater patronage. Difficult selections well executed," were only a few of the many comments heard following the concert of modern and classical music given by the Vulcan Concert Orchestra at the Vulcan theatre on Wednesday, March 21st.

The entire personnel of the orchestra and their leader, Don Forsland, must have been disappointed when the curtain rose to find the theatre barely half seated. Months of hard work and planning were necessary to stage a concert ever played by such a local group.

All artists proved their ability by playing musical selections with a wide range of variation and the audience heartily applauded every number. Vocal selections by Miss Rose Hartwig and Mr. Wm. Walker were greatly enjoyed and added still further variety to the program.

W. E. Butchart was chairman for the evening and spoke highly of the musical talent of Vulcan. He said the town was fortunate in having a leader with the ability of Mr. Forsland, and complimented Miss Hartwig on her recent win at the Drumheller Festival. In introducing the orchestra he named every member and spoke of individual ability.

The program opened with a march, "Palace of Peace," this was followed by the overture "Princess of India." This was the heaviest number of the selections, played.

A trio, flute, violin and piano by D. Forsland, H. Washburn and Miss Walker, followed. It was a selection of lyric music "Dreamy Moments."

The negro melody sketch "Down South" drew tremendous applause, and was played in a style that pleased. The nocturne, "L'Heure Bleue" was a difficult piece rendered well, utilizing the whole tone scale. Miss Rose Hartwig sang the vocal refrain, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time," accompanied by the orchestra. This selection was made by Mr. Forsland to show the contrast between the classical and modern numbers. The music is of the modern Vienna waltz type. Solos heard during this, the first half of the program, were a vocal solo by Miss Hartwig, "The Spirit Flower," and a violin solo by Mr. Forsland, "Ave Maria." Both were greatly appreciated.

Following the intermission the orchestra opened with the oriental sketch, "In a Persian Market." This proved one of the most popular selections on the program. It described in music, the scene of a Persian market, and opened with the approach of the caravans. Until the time of the leaving of the caravans, the selection described the begging of alms by the beggars, the entrance of the princess later followed by her father, the caliph. A beautiful number well executed. Another popular number was "Jalousie," a selection of modern tempo heard often on the radio. This was followed by the modern gypsy air "Two Guitars."

Vocal selections heard were a solo by Wm. Walker and a duet by Miss Hartwig and Wm. Walker. Both were excellently done.

A well known and beautiful arrangement of "The Glow Worm," was played by a trio, cello, violin and piano, Misses Dora and Mabel McPherson and D. Forsland.

The program concluded with the American march, "Spirit of Independence" and "God Save the King." Exciting music was played while the audience left the theatre.

Composers of the selections heard were Vandersloot, K. L. King, R. Stolz, A. Ketelbey, Harry Horlick, Holmann and many others.

Stage settings for the affair were attractively arranged with potted plants and green back set.

BERRYWATER NEWS

A meeting of the U.F.A. and U. F. W.A. was held at Mrs. Fred Mensinger's on Monday, March 12th. Owing to a heavy wind and dust storm the attendance was not up to standard, the men not having enough to make a quorum. However the ladies went ahead with their meeting at the conclusion of which Mrs. Mensinger served a dainty lunch.

SAFE CRACKING JOB AT KIRKCALDY STORE

A "Professional" Job says Corporal Forsland Who Investigated the Robbery

Termed as a "professional job" by Corporal Forsland, R.C.M.P., the safe cracking and robbery at the Kirkcaldy store, was the second time in six months thieves had broken into the building. On Monday morning A. J. Maisey, owner of the store and postmaster, was considerably surprised, when on going to his safe to discover that someone had beat him to the opening up of the safe. The vault door was completely blown off by the force of an explosion of "soup." Stamps, money orders and some cash were missing. Loss at present is estimated between $75. and $100. Later in the morning it was discovered that the North Star Oils Station had been broken into, the participants making away with 15 gallons of high test gasoline.

The party entering the store evidently took advantage of the noise being made by a freight train engine that was shunting cars on the sidetracks to set off their "soup." No one in the neighborhood heard the explosion. Getaway was made by automobile as the marks in the snow showed.

Corporal Forsland is still investigating the case as we go to press and up to this time no suspects have been discovered.

BERRYWATER ENJOY CONCERT AND DANCE

Songs, Pantomime, Sketches and Playlet Make Balanced Program

An enjoyable concert followed by a dance was held at the Berrywater school on Friday evening, March 23rd, under the auspices of the Berrywater U.F.W.A. The audience was large and appreciative. A unique feature was the broadcasting of the programme by radio, the intervals between numbers being filled in by humorous comments on local events announced over the wire.

The initial number on the programme was the song "O Canada," followed by a few well chosen remarks of welcome by the president of the U.F.W.A., Mrs. Amey. Mrs. McRoberts, Mrs. Adams and Mr. Douglas Gill then sang "Lamplighting Time in the Valley," and "Goodnight Little Girl my Dream."

The next item was a pantomime entitled "Young Lochinvar," read by Miss Douglas and acted by the school children, followed by a song, "Voice in the old Village Choir" and "Bonnie Dundee" as an encore by Mr. Douglas Gill.

The ladies of the U.F.W.A. assisted by the young people of the community staged the "Story of the Bells." Mr. L. A. Douglass and Mr. D. Gill presented their amusing Dwarf Dance and Master Gordon Campbell recited "Castor Oil," after which the U. F. W. A. ladies acted a melodrama in pantomime.

Little Lawrence Mensinger sang "All Alone on the Range" and the school children presented "Highway Men" and the dance of the soldiers. Mrs. F. Noble, Mrs. F. Mensinger and Messrs W. Oldfield and Lorne Richardson sang the "Log Cabin."

The concluding item was a play entitled "The Next Year's Country", the theme of which dealt with various vicissitudes of pioneering on a homestead in the west. The cast was composed of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Oldfield as the farmer and his wife; Mrs. H. C. Douglass as the teacher daughter, and Mr. D. Gill as "Bob" the bachelor neighbor. All took their parts well and quite a few of the audience could picture identical scenes as realistic as the hail storm looming up on the horizon and no insurance.

Previous to the National Anthem Mrs. Amey thanked all the participants in the program. Supper provided by the ladies of the U.F.W.A. was then served after which dancing was indulged in to the wee small hours to music provided by the Hansen orchestra.

Miss McCarthy, Miss Richardson and Mrs. R. Adams kindly acted as accompanists for the program.

THIS WEEK'S STORY

A poor excuse is better than none; or that's the way it appeared in one Vulcan home during the week. So the story goes, the following conversation took place between a seven year old son and his mother at the breakfast table one morning this week.

"You will never do your school work unless you eat more breakfast," said the mother.

"Can't have exams," quickly replied the son.

"Why should that make any difference?"

"Well," drawled the boy, "If I eat any more my stomach will stick out; push out my sweater, which will rub on the exam paper and get it dirty."

The young lad taking advantage of the mirth created, grabbed his hat, and made his way to the place of learning without eating his breakfast.

Vulcan Students Union Hold Monthly Meeting

Statement of Dance Proceeds Given Program Presented

At three o'clock on Friday afternoon the members of the Vulcan high school students union met in the Oddfellows' hall for their regular meeting. President Ruth McFarland called the meeting to order, and after the singing of O' Canada, Edna McPherson read the minutes of the last meeting.

The secretary gave a report of the proceeds of the high school dance held on March 16th. The expenditures totalled $66.40 and the receipts were $70.50, leaving a balance of $4.10.

A short discussion on sport was held and it seems likely that there will be more activity in this respect than there has been in the past few years. As no further business was brought forward a short program was presented.

Joyce Robson, Jean Warden, Marie and Herriet Gonyea combined in a quartette, entitled "We're Going to Have Weather Whether or Not." The song was worded as to take several "digs" at a few of the students. As an encore they sang the "Pagan Love Song." Following Edna McPherson gave two delightful piano solos, "Twentieth Century Blues" and "Opalescent Rag." Then followed the reading of the school newspaper. It is understood that many dire threats were uttered against the editor of the paper, A. Collier for a number of embarrassing items revealed. So serious did this trouble him, that on Sunday he was seen fondling dogs made of alabaster in one of his friend's home.

The reading of the paper brought the program to a close and the meeting adjourned with the singing of God Save the King.

HERRONTON GROUP PRESENT PLAY AT REID HILL

Musical Numbers, Skit, Monologue, Followed by Dance

Residents of Reid Hill and surrounding communities were entertained on Friday evening by the Herronton young people's play, "Dutch Jake," at the Community hall. A good sized audience greeted the players, and a larger crowd, many from Vulcan, attended the dance which followed.

Local entertainers appearing on the program included Mr. Web Bride with a humorous monologue, "Kelley's Dream," and Miss A. Tuttle singing a solo selection.

The play, of the comedy melodrama type, was enjoyed by the audience. Those taking part in the presentation were Verne Kennedy, Katherine McLennan, Eric Thurlow, Elsie Green, Jack Brown, Eleanor Kennedy and Clarence Green. Ed McFarlane and Bert Weber, well known Herrontonites, presented a humorous skit that went over well. The play was in charge of Eric Thurlow, a former Vulcan resident.

The story of the play is laid in a New England home, where the villain of the story swindles a retired couple out of their life's saving. Complications develop in a surprising manner when Dutch Jake foils the swindler. Developing on these lines the villain is finally mortally wounded, but the plot has a happy ending before the drop of the curtain.

Music for the dance was played by local musicians.

"Redemption's Song" At United Church

An Easter Cantata by Fred B. Holton, Under Direction of R. H. Weale

The congregation of the Vulcan United church have a real treat in store for Easter Sunday. At the evening services the senior choir under the direction of R. H. Weale will present the Easter Cantata, "Redemption's Song," by Fred B. Holton. The cantata is a story in music of the crucifixion of Jesus and His rising from the tomb. It is divided into 12 songs, and choruses and opens with the "New Song" by the entire choir with soprano obligato by Miss Rose Hartwig. The second song of the cantata, "Ride on in Majesty," is taken by the men's section of the choir, followed by "Midnight in the Garden," a soprano and alto duet by Misses Amy Tuttle and Mayme Lebeau. The entire group joined for the next song "And He, Bearing His Cross Went Forth," with the bass solo part taken by Wm. Walker. Following in order are "If I Bear Not a Scar for Him," soprano by Miss Rose Hartwig; "Now Upon the First Day of the Week," by the choir; "Tell the Glad Story," women's chorus; "Death is Swallowed up in Victory," alto solo by Miss J. Warden and choir; "The Song of the Redeemed," tenor solo by W. E. Butchart and choir; "Behold, I Stand at the Door and Knock," entire choir; "We Shall See Jesus," bass solo by Wm. Walker and choir. The finale number, "Rejoice and be Glad" is taken by the entire choir.

For the past month the choir have been working hard in preparation for the Easter Sunday presentation, and the cantata will no doubt prove fitting to the religious festivities of the Easter season. The choir will be accompanied by instrumental music, by Misses Mable, Edna and Dora McPherson and Con Kettleson.

EASTER

Nothing is so natural, so universal, so inevitable and so inexplicable as Easter. The book of Easter is written every spring all over the earth, in greening grass and budding trees and springing flowers, and the carol of Easter is the song of the home coming birds. Although it has not the universal appeal of Christmas, it must be recognized that, but for Easter, Christmas would have been an empty unreality. If the manger cradle had emptied itself into the garden tomb, with the stone unremoved and the seal unbroken, or with no evidence that the body had risen in recognized reality, the cradle would have been for gotten, and Christmas would have been an unbroken or un kept feast.

The Easter mystery is defined in the simple assertion "The third day He rose again from the dead" and this fact leads to the belief in the resurrection.

Resurrection means the coming back to the immortal life of the collective personality. As a grain of corn sheds its hard shell; a butterfly, its chrysalis; a silkworm, its cocoon; a bird its discarded egg, to be that for which these were but temporary coverings, the true life is all the while within. This is the resurrection of mercy.

When Christ rose from the grave, He was transfigured. Yet He was the same, so that above all expectation and against the evidence of death, the Apostles could proclaim to the world that He who suffered upon the cross had redeemed Israel; the same, in patience, in tenderness in chastening reproof, in watchful sympathy, in quickening love. And this is the mystery, the marvel, the triumph and the glory of Easter.

W. Crosswell Doane

MOVING BACKWARD

In considering the suggested plan for taking over the rural phone lines of this district, and operating them on the farmer-owned plan, one man asked the question "must we move backward?" Must the more isolated farmer-folk as well as those nearer town, relinquish a service that has woven itself into the fibre of community life?

The rural telephone system in the province is in a bad way. It is said that it never actually has paid its way, a condition that has only become acute in the last few years, when the entire service, both urban and rural, has greatly diminished in revenue. But at the present time it becomes a question of how long the rural service can be continued as a drag on provincial ownership. An increased rural rate would be required to make it self-supporting, and the 50 per cent remaining subscribers could not stand this.

The alternative that is presented seems to be a farm-owned system operating by units, with central connection. Under such circumstances, the province accepts a very serious loss from book value of the system. But at least there is action. The districts continue to enjoy this very necessary facility, and the province at least is in no worse condition than under the present system of drift.

When Mr. Howson was speaking here a few months ago he said that the rural phone service should be regarded as semi-social in nature. There appears to be much truth in this. It is little short of a necessity, particularly in isolated areas and in areas where the citizens have discontinued the use of motor cars. Only a few years ago, the government was being urged to instal phones in every rural school. To many, it seemed a necessity at that time. And to many it seems as great a necessity today. The blizzards that have occasionally swept over this country, have forced upon all humane citizens a realization of this need. In cases of sickness, or accident, or even to relieve the strain of loneliness, the country telephone cannot be reckoned merely on the basis of revenue. It is as vital a social service as others which are maintained purely from that standpoint.

To abandon these lines, to drive people back to pioneer conditions, should only be considered as a last alternative. When one element of society works from 12 to 16 hours a day, producing food that the world must have in order to live, when it is producing as capably and intelligently as it ever has, surely its contribution entitles it to some of the facilities of civilization.

Although the salvaging of the rural phone system presents an infinity of difficulties and some losses it would be better to face losses and adopt some new measures than to consider discontinuance on any large scale.

TRY TO REMEMBER

It is perhaps only natural that modern writers and speakers should glorify the days of our fathers and our grand fathers, and idealize the people of the past generations. But when their enthusiasm carries them to the point of seeing nothing but good in those early days, and when they press their point by unfavorable comments on the ambitions and pursuits of the moderns, they offer a challenge. And most people with a forty year old memory in good working order, would fain take shots at the halo of sweetness and light that encircles the noble sixties and seventies and eighties.

—It is acknowledged at once that our grand parents and parents were fine people. But were they so completely contented with pioneer privations, so utterly happy with nothing but the humble log cabin, the crust of bread, as the modern sentimentalists declare? Then why the transition to the homes of brick, to the horse hair furniture, to the boughten carpet, to the melodeon? Why did they abandon the broadcasting of their seed, the cradling of their grain. Ambition and desire for the comforts of the time must have stirred them even as it stirs their grand children. Each generation pressing forward. They made the best of things, so far as we know. But if no woman ever had said, "I must have a sewing machine," these would never have been sewing machines in homes.

Look back on the past. Recall the tales from your mother of the competition amongst the girls of her day for the prettiest dresses, the best voice in the choir, the art of playing the melodeon. Recall the stories of your father's courting days when he had to have the finest buggy and the best driver in the township. Ambition, sinful worldly ambition that was a big driving force as it is today. The desire for "things" that would make life brighter, more interesting and pleasanter.

There were no doubt big families that got along well together, but most people can recall friction and resentment over trivial matters, that could and did split a family in two. There were fusses over wills, line fence quarrels, political and religious cleavages. Far more deep-rooted and bitter than anything in modern ken. And, thinking over communities one would risk the assertion that the average of "dourness," and sternness was much higher amongst old men than it is today.

Recall also the petty factions in the school yards, the persecutions, the mean nesses. Children mingle much more happily and tolerantly today than in the glorious nineteenth century. They have learned adaptability and scoff at prejudices that held a past generation in bond.

Remember in the old days, if a girl was crossed in love, it was not at all unusual for her to go into a decline. It was sad, but rather romantic. Imagine a modern girl condescending to such weakness! If a young man was crossed in love, which was not so often, he went over to Michigan or North Dakota or got "a little queer." It was quite taken for granted. They don't go on like that nowadays. Remember how whole families would be wiped out with consumption, and it was taken for granted! And recall if you will, those invigorating mud roads of the early days.

If the old folks had been as content with their privations as our idealists are pleased to insist, we would have travelled backwards to homes in the caves. Thank goodness, they were full of modern follies and desires.

THE DOUGHTY SCOT

"Behold how great a matter a small fire kindleth," or words to that effect. In the last week or two, the correspondence column of the Calgary Herald has been a scene of conflict, rivalling the cat and the anti cat war of a few years ago. This time it is a battle of Scot and anti-Scot. The pibroch has sounded, and many a potent pen has dashed into the fray. A Scot seems to have started the trouble, by lauding the good old days, when she was competently brought up on oatmeal and "tatties." She scoffed at the current solicitude over undernourishment of the unemployed. Fire has been flashing ever since. One writer deprecates that this pioneer, as well as others, are still thinking in terms of the age of scarcity as prevailing in the eighteenth century. He does not believe that the archaic virtues of oatmeal and bare feet are the social medicine that should be applied to the modern disease. "Such a standard, if followed by a majority of the nation, must lead to poverty, barbarism and decay of national progress. Where everyone saves and scrimps as much as he can, no motive can exist for expansion." He quotes Samuel Johnson who said, "The noblest prospect that a Scotchman ever sees is the high road that leads up to England."

Then the next to take up cudgels is a Scot who calls upon the world to survey the pinnacles in this country's professional and industrial life, and it would be found that many of these pinnacles have been and are being scaled by the products of a land reared on porridge and tatties.

It would be quite unsafe to enter such an arena, except to agree with everyone. If the Scotch were all reared on the frugal bowl—which one is inclined to doubt multitudes of them escaped from it with a good deal of celerity and sought richer lands. They have stormed the citadels of the world and have captured quite a proportion of them doing well for others as well as themselves.

But there is such a thing as making a high virtue out of necessity. Because poverty at one time tied a great people to the porridge bowl does not prove that porridge should be the just lot of any large proportion of the Canadian people. As a nation, we are in no condition of famine. Rather, we have so great plenitude of products that our people must eat sparingly because we cannot see those products. We must go without, because we have too much.

INDIVIDUAL INITIATIVE

One of the great merits attributed to the capitalistic system is that it encourages the maximum of individual initiative. This initiative seems to find the greatest and most dangerous expression in terms of great wealth, and in the process of acquiring the wealth so many qualities of acquisitiveness and exploitation are let loose, that the initiative of one man may cost the freedom and happiness of thousands of others.

The public is beginning to question the virtues of a system that permits one individual or group to flourish at the expense of others. The drive for personal success has resulted in the overdevelopment of selfishness and ruthlessness, which are certainly not admirable qualities in a nation or in individuals. It is possible that some legislative curb will be placed on the free play of these qualities, tending toward the compulsory development of a more social spirit.

Is there any good reason for believing that in a more socialistic state all ambition and desire for achievement would be lessened? The constructive workers of the country have never been dominated by love for personal wealth. The desire for riches is not the dominating force that drives the inventor or the scientist. In fact, few inventors have benefitted materially from their own inventions. That has been left to the financier, who is rarely a creator.

To suggest that men spend their energies and their lives in chosen occupations, primarily for the money they are making, is to place a low estimate on human motives. Anyone who has opportunity to follow a calling that he loves, finds that money plays a minor part in his enthusiasm. He works for his own satisfaction, stimulated by an inner urge. He needs his pay cheque or his little profit in order to get by, but love of his work dominates him.

Dangers of destroying individual initiative, by placing more emphasis on general social progress, have been greatly exaggerated. Pride in good accomplishment is a strong characteristic of human beings, quite aside from reward. The welfare of the country is in much greater danger from those whose desire for power and wealth is overdeveloped and who are left free to fulfil this desire.

The provincial budget for the current year is $15,000,000. This sounds like a sizable chunk of money, but where can reductions be made. Consider it again from another angle. The entire fifteen million dollars outlay would build a battleship and a few torpedo boats which could be destroyed in fifteen minutes in any first rate naval engagement.—Hanna Herald.

CHAOS TO CONTROL
BY NORMAN ANGELLSummary of Current Work of Great Writer on Economics, by J. D.
Maxwell

Many of our readers have followed Norman Angell's writings since the date of his earlier book, "The Great Illusion," which appeared during the war. His authority on international matters is well known, and in the following article he presents specifically wherein, the people as makers or breakers of government have failed. Their adherence to principles recognized as evil, is contrary to their urgent cries for alleviation of burdens.

"We hear much of impending democratic collapse. This collapse is not inevitable, but failure is due to the lack of setting definitely before men an aim, enabling them to understand the mechanism of society. This failure of education can be remedied.

Take War Debts

Mr. Angell then argues that a more thinking attitude be taken on the international problem of war debts. "International obligations rising out of war are a continuation of war itself. They block international co-operation and are evil psychologically and economically. Along the same line are tariffs. All systems of export bounties getting rich at the expense of another is bound to retard any scheme of international co-operation. We might say that tariff imposition is a scheme whereby a select minority get rich at the expense of those less fortunate.

Two Contradictory Policies

The world has been involved in trying to transfer large sums of war debts from debtor to creditor nations, and at the same time has placed obstructions by way of tariffs to impede the free circulation of trade commodities.

In 1918 the British and French clamored for German money, not German goods. But Germany had less than 1 per cent in gold of the debt to be exacted. Germany offered to pay in labor, France declined. America clamored for British and German money, and to what end? The plain fact is that the average person in U. S. A. can see no fundamental connection between debt payment and tariffs and until he does little headway can be made.

"People in general are economic illiterates. They make or wreck governments, causing politicians to do those things that put their country at a disadvantage. Newspapers continue to pound in the idea, "We want

AUCTION SALES
BRISK IN ONTARIO

A news story of a good auction sale held recently in Ontario is going the rounds of the papers, as an indication of better times in the East.

"Bidding was brisk and there was a good feeling among those attending. Prices were greatly improved over those which have been the usual run. Fresh cows with calves brought as high as $79.50, and averaged $77. The entire herd of cows averaged over $65. Small hogs of 60 pounds brought $6. each. Horses went to $125. & $130 and the implements and household effects brought good prices. And the sale was strictly cash.

LOCAL ITEMS

The C.N.R. deficit is down one million dollars in 1933.

Automobile licenses to the 20 per cent reduced rate will be on sale on March 31.

The newly formed Sunshine orchestra will make their initial appearance in the memorial hall on Friday, April 6th playing, for a dance.

Friends of Mr. J. Deans will be pleased to learn of his recovery. He will be confined to bed for sometime yet, however.

German gold, but not German goods," Nationalism, whose very principle disrupts economic well being become national beliefs.

Capitalism Decaying

"Moreover, we have noted in the past war period that capitalism has been going into decay, not the work of socialists, but the work of capitalists following nationalism staggering under depressive blows, caused by is nationalism. The nationalistic doctrines have hurled us from one period of misery to another. Yet the hostility of the business and professional man of Europe is directed at the socialist. It is the false-ideas of conservative and "patriotic" parties that have caused lack of security in militaristic states.

Press Control of Thought

Three quarters of the British press, owned by two wealthy men, for over ten years violently attacked any plan of reparation adjustment, the very principle which will eventually restore order, and is inevitable ultimatum.

If we want economic salvation badly enough, we must study intelligently. The public—the average voter—must see clearly the principles of international debt adjustment, of tariffs, free trade, international monetary standards etc. Only when the average voter understands, can he direct the policies of his government.

VULCAN ALBERTA*OTTAWA SPOTLIGHT

Wilfred Eggleston

Just to cap a momentous session, a couple of Liberal members would like Sir Herbert Holt, Sir Charles Gordon and other super-financiers called before a committee of the House to explain the relationship between the banks and the depression, the banks and the C.P.R. In other words, another Stevens' inquiry, only projected towards finance instead of industry. I doubt whether they will get it. It would give Ottawa and the country lot to talk about if it came off.

The Stevens probe slackened down a bit, although we had a couple of witnesses last week who were ready to describe the big departmental mail order and chain stores as monsters devouring the prosperity of the country and driving workers down to slavery. So far nobody seems to be ready to say who it was drove the farmer the fisherman and the lumber man down to bankruptcy or a miserable pittance. Everybody must know that a considerable percentage of those latter classes are as badly off as the laboring and craftsman classes in Canada. Did mass buying of wheat or fish, or lumber, bring about the collapse in these industries? However the inquiry isn't finished yet. No doubt before it concludes it will have answered a lot more questions.

I hear, unofficially but I think reliably, that the British miller has persuaded the Canadian government that mixing Garnet wheat in with Marquis Red Fife and other standard varieties is hurting the Canadian export trade in the Mother country, and that in future Garnet wheat is to be excluded from No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 Northern. The British millers are willing to buy Garnet for blending, but they want to know what they are getting. They don't want mixture of Marquis and Garnet.

Perhaps even before this is in print the government may have introduced its agricultural marketing legislation. I hear that it is drastic and impressive, and that wheat as well as other commodities are to be subjected to some marketing regulations above and beyond what is now in existence.

The federal government borrowed some money recently. Fifteen millions or so. They only paid 2.85 to 3.12 per cent interest, which is quite a saving from the four or five they have had to pay, and from the seven or eight you and I have to pay (when we can get it at all). The interesting thing is that instead of borrowing from the banks in the usual manner, the government was able to sell treasury bills of $1000,000 denomination to other interests. In other words, to get away from a bank monopoly of short-term credit. Hitherto there has been no short-term money market to speak of in Canada. This seems to be the beginnings of an effort to start one.

This new bureau of translators has taken up four or five days of the time of the House. Seems a lot of time for a measure affecting 90 civil servants. Someway or other opposing members have discovered a vital bilingual issue in the proposal to pool all departmental translators in one bureau. I'm afraid the rank and file of Canadians won't be deeply impressed by the issue. Not with such appalling conditions in the country awaiting swift and constructive action.

The Upper Chamber has re-introduced Canada's own shipping legislation. It was made possible when Statute of Westminster freed Canada from the Colonial Laws Validity Act and other restrictive British legislation, unapproved by any Imperial Statute. Meantime hospital sweepstake bill ran into some tangles, and will probably run into a lot more before it is law.
